

something, some peculiar reason for not supporting it, because I will tell you, very frankly, it is an antiagriculture amendment and an antifarmer amendment. Now, ladies and gentlemen, call it what you like. Call it anything you like, a skunk is a skunk is a skunk. If you powder him and put him in and label him and douse him with perfume, he is still a skunk, and this amendment is designed to narrowly exclude...it is not going to affect that many farmers...but it is designed to exclude the farmers from the benefits of this bill. Now, ladies and gentlemen, when I originally read the bill, I wanted to support it. I still want to support it, but each time you turn the corkscrew down one more turn, it becomes more and more narrow. Oh, it is broad enough. It is much more broader than some of you thought. As I have said with the exemptions for computers and for corporate aircraft, I have a hunch that mainframe computer thing is going to encompass a whole raft of businesses, far more likely to tend toward abuse, my good friend, Senator Vard, than this little bit of amendment here. One more point made by Senator Rod Johnson, the Taggares family was far more concerned about harassment they might receive from government on environmental issues and business issues, tax issues, change in policy, et cetera, than they were about tax breaks. Oh, they would like to have them as well as anybody else but they are much more concerned about the cost of having to relocate, for example, their waste disposal system because some bureaucrat decides it is not in compliance, or because they have to do something different with their farming land because we decide they can't do something which we thought originally they could do. Those are their major concerns. I don't know if they would come or not if this bill becomes law or does not become law, but that was not a major concern. It was, in fact, 775 when they came around I don't think was even drawn, Senator Vard or Rod. I don't think it was. Ladies and gentlemen, there has got to be something you can go back home to Bellwood with, if you are going to vote for this bill. Now I appreciate, I appreciate what you are doing for big business, and it is partly justified, but it ought to be able to be addressed across the board. You ought to be able to utilize it across the State of Nebraska, and unless you adopt this amendment, ladies and gentlemen, you are saying, specifically, we don't want anything to do with agriculture in this business, we don't trust you, we think you are a bunch of thieves and skunks. I don't think that is what this Legislature wants to tell the farmers of this state. I am not going to tell them that. In regard to the 300 thing, Senator Vard Johnson says only a majority...
